EMBA 10 Roads to disruption

In today's world, entrepreneurs and executives must face two new, yet significant, factors that affect political and economic environments, alter social relations and deeply impact businesses, their operations and their processes.

The first one is the Digital Revolution. The advent of big data, machine learning, and new technologies require new organizational approaches and competencies.

The second one is Sustainability. The need to create and maintain a sustainable society for future generations must be integral part of a successful business strategy.

Each function, in every organizations, must understand their implications and apply the appropriate transformations to obtain a competitive advantage in their markets.

In today's environment, simply closing the managerial skills gap is not enough anymore. In order to prosper in this new reality an innovative and visionary approach is required. It is essential to question the validity of existing models with a pioneering, and not merely adaptive, spirit and develop new paradigms.

Università della Svizzera italiana's Executive Master in Business Administration program embraces this spirit of innovation and is constantly evolving to ensure the highest education standard to the participants.
